Susan's presentation will discuss the kind of needs that families coping with psychotic illnesses have, why we don't have what is needed, and how we can work to improve mental health services.

Susan's memoir, After Her Brain Broke, Helping My Daughter Recover Her Sanity, has been recommended by the Mental Health Commission of Canada. It's also been recommended by NAMI and EUFAMI, which are the world's largest organizations advocating for families coping with mental illnesses.

Her articles about mental illness policy have appeared in a variety of publications including the National Post, The Tyee, the BC Teacher Newsmagazine, the Province, and CMHA Visions magazine. An archive of her many articles for Huffington Post Canada can be found at:
